

Contents

	Acknowledgments	vii
	Foreword Robert J. Birgeneau	ix
ONE	Introduction—Proposition 209 and the National Debate on Affirmative Action Christopher Edley Jr., with Ana Henderson, Michal Kurlaender, and Eric Grodsky	I
TWO	Interpreting Proposition 209 and California’s Developing Case Law on Affirmative Action Jeffrey L. Bleich and Mark R. Conrad	II
THREE	The Demography of Higher Education in the Wake of Affirmative Action Eric Grodsky and Michal Kurlaender	33
	Policy Comment Fabian Núñez	59
FOUR	Investigating the College Destinations of University of California Freshman Admits Susan A. Wilbur	63
FIVE	A Portrait of Underrepresented Minorities at the University of California, 1994–2008 Tongshan Chang and Heather Rose	83
SIX	The Role of Community Colleges in Promoting Student Diversity in California Josipa Roksa, Eric Grodsky, and Willard C. Hom	103

	Policy Comment	123
	Mary Sue Coleman
SEVEN	The Quest for Excellence and Diversity in UC Freshman Admissions	129
	Michael T. Brown, Mark Rashid, and David Stern
EIGHT	The Effectiveness of California Standards Tests as Alternatives to the SAT in Predicting Freshman Grades	155
	Samuel J. Agronow and Catherine Horn
NINE	Building Educational Field Stations to Promote Diversity and Access in Higher Education	173
	Hugh Mehan, Gail Kaufman, Cecil Lytle, Karen Hunter Quartz, and Rhona S. Weinstein
TEN	Lessons about College Admissions from the Texas Top 10 Percent Law	195
	Marta Tienda
	Policy Comment	211
	Peter Schmidt
ELEVEN	Toward Equal Opportunity in Higher Education	217
	Michal Kurlaender and Eric Grodsky
	Notes	227
	About the Editors	255
	About the Contributors	257
	Index	265