

In Memory of Kolajo Paul Afolabi
1980–2011

The Harvard Educational Review wishes to celebrate and pay tribute to the life and work of Kolajo Paul Afolabi, a member of our 2009–2011 Editorial Board, who died in an accident this September. A gifted educator, a meticulous scholar, a passionate editor, and a joyous friend to many of us, Kolajo stood out in the scholarly community as a person who combined intellectual rigor with moral commitment and personal warmth. We are grateful for the time we spent with Kolajo as editors and for the infectious energy he brought to our work. We know that his spirit will be with this journal, and with all of us, far into the future.