The Harvard Educational Review has recently learned of the death, on January 5, 2011, of Margaret Kotte O’Hara. Ms. O’Hara worked at the Review for twenty-nine years, first as an office assistant and then, from 1965 to 1987, as the journal’s general manager. Her contributions to the review—as a publisher, editor, and advisor to the editorial board—were manifold and of inestimable value. She was a crucial part of the journal’s history, and we note her passing with sadness and respect.
